

The Dream Pool is a stone plaza at the base of The Dreaming with a curving stone bench designed for rest and inspiration, to allow artwork viewing, and to foster conversation. A glass wellhead will be set into the stones of the plaza. Through this small, open structure shining water running underground can be seen and heard, due to a filtered, self-cleaning, underground water feature. At night, light will filter up through the stone pavers and through thousands of letters carved into bronze bands embedded in the stone, expressing dreams from Frederick residents of all ages. These circles of text reach to the base of the historic FSK Hotel, climbing the stone wall until they disappear into the shimmering glass veil. The plaza floor will be heated in the winter.

Eighteen historical interpretive panels in art glass along the top of the bench walls will provide insight into the extraordinary cultural heritage of Frederick County as a crossroads of history for centuries, and explain the artifacts of Frederick represented in the artwork. These vertical glass "fins" will be illuminated by concealed lighting. Educational materials including downloadable lesson plans for schools will support the impact of this project for many years to come. This plaza was designed by William Cochran and architect Jim Mills.
